LEARN EVOLUTION VIRTUAL LAB

ANSWER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS AS YOU COMPLETE EACH PART OF THE VIRTUAL LAB

Answer the following questions as you complete each part of the virtual lab.

Part 1: Introduction

1. As you begin the virtual lab, you will see a virtual world with eight islands and a population of 1000000. How many of these individuals belong to each of the eight island populations? What is the total population of the world?

Initially, all 1000000 individuals belong to the same population. As you progress through the virtual lab, you will see that the population is divided into eight islands. Each island has its own unique environment and resources. The total population of the world is 1000000.

2. An adaptation is a characteristic that is inherited and helps an organism survive in its environment. What are some examples of adaptations that you see in the virtual lab?

Examples of adaptations include the color of the fur, the shape of the beak, and the size of the body. Adaptations help organisms survive in their environment. For example, a bird with a long beak can reach food that a bird with a short beak cannot reach.

3. How do you think the environment affects the evolution of a population? Give an example of how the environment affects evolution.

The environment affects evolution by providing the resources and challenges that organisms must overcome. For example, a population of birds living in a forest with many trees will evolve to have long wings and strong flight muscles.

4. What are the different types of selection that you see in the virtual lab?

There are three types of selection: directional selection, stabilizing selection, and disruptive selection. Directional selection occurs when the environment favors one extreme of a trait. Stabilizing selection occurs when the environment favors the average of a trait. Disruptive selection occurs when the environment favors both extremes of a trait.

5. How do you think the environment affects the evolution of a population?

The environment affects evolution by providing the resources and challenges that organisms must overcome. For example, a population of birds living in a forest with many trees will evolve to have long wings and strong flight muscles.
