

Surface Weather Map Showing Storm System in the Eastern United States

Warm air advection occurs when the wind blows across isotherms from higher pressure (values to lower isotherm) values. This is because air is being transported across a location from the higher pressure. Based on this the low above, you would expect precipitation of that location to be heavy, cold air advection occurs when the wind blows across the isotherms from lower (colder) values to higher (warmer) values. Thus, colder air being transported by the wind to a warmer location produces falling temperatures.

Based on wind directions and the isotherm patterns on the Figure 2 map, determine the type of air advection (warm or cold) that would be occurring at each station.

1. Winds at station A are occurring at Station _____
