Abigail Gordon is a 52-year-old African-American widowed female who is accompanied to the Emergency Department by her daughter. The client's grooming and hygiene are fair, but her overall appearance is disheveled. Abigail's motor activity is slow, she rarely makes eye contact, and her responses to questions are slow and barely audible. When asked what she prefers to be called, she replies, "I don't care."

After the RN completes the admission assessment, the practical nurse (PN) asks Abigail what has brought her to the hospital. Abigail replies, "Things just aren't right" and begins to cry. After further conversation, Abigail describes her mood as "very sad now." She rarely goes out or invites friends to visit. She admits that she feels like strangers are saying bad things about her. Sometimes she hears a man's voice that is a "little bit scary."
