each price, we get the quantity supplied for the entire market by multiplying the quantity supplied by the typical firm (from the individual supply curve) by 100. At a price of $1, each firm produces 40 units, so the market supply is 4000 units (see Panel A). If the price increases to $2, each firm increases production to 6 units (see Panel B), so the market supply is 600 units (see Panel B).

What happens if there are two identical but larger firms? Different individual supply curves? To compare the market supply in this case, we add the quantities supplied by the hundreds of firms in the market. The assumption that there are identical firms makes it easier to derive the market supply curve from the supply curve of the typical firm, but it does not change the analysis.

Market Equilibrium

Figure 4.4 shows a perfectly competitive market in equilibrium. For a demand curve, we combine the individual supply curves.

- 1. At the market level, the quantity of the product supplied equals the quantity demanded. The demand curve represents the demand curve supply curve is shown in Panel A.
- 2. The typical firm in the market maximizes its profit, given the market price. Given the market price of $1, each of the 100 firms maximizes profit by producing 40 units of output (Panel B).
