

4. Component Descriptions

A. TT-950/951/952 T²CAS Computer Unit

The T²CAS Computer Unit (CU) is the heart of the T²CAS system consisting of an existing TCAS 2000 LRU with a TAWS/Reactive Windshear function implemented on a separate circuit card assembly (CCA). The TAWS/RWS function uses a processor and I/O circuitry that is independent from the TCAS function's processor and I/O. As such, the software programs for TCAS and TAWS/RWS are independent from each other. By having independent hardware, I/O and software for TCAS and TAWS/RWS, the possibility of a common mode failure causing the loss of both functions is significantly reduced.

The TCAS function (CCA) contains the RF transmitter and the receivers necessary to interrogate and receive replies from other transponder equipped aircraft. Dual microprocessors are utilized to implement the surveillance and collision avoidance algorithms. The algorithms determine whether an intruder aircraft should be considered a threat and then determine the appropriate vertical response to avoid a midair or near midair collision. In addition, output data is provided to drive displays that inform the flight crew what action to take or avoid.

The TCAS function also provides an interface to the onboard Mode S transponder in order to communicate with other TCAS II equipped aircraft in the airspace.

The TAWS/RWS function (CCA) consists primarily of the Ground Collision Avoidance Module (GCAM). The GCAM contains the core TAWS/Windshear algorithms which utilize A/C state data, performance database variables and Terrain/Airport database information to calculate required TAWS/Windshear alarms, build a terrain display buffer, and then pass the data back to the platform. The resulting terrain information is then output to ARINC 708A compatible weather radar or EFIS displays.

The T²CAS CU also provides past and present LRU and system status through the front panel mounted TEST switch and PASS/FAIL annunciators. Software updates can be incorporated into the computer by an ARINC 603 or 615 data loader port through either the connector mounted on the front panel of the computer or the port provided on the LRU rear connector.
