Research on Emotion and Learning: Contributions from Latin America Camilo Hurtado-Parrado, Carlos Gantiva, Leonardo A. Ortega, Alexander Gómez-A, Lucas Cuenya, Javier Leonardo Rico, 2020-05-11 Latin America has increased its share of world scientific publications by nearly twofold during the last two decades approximately from 2 to 4% Despite this positive trend the scholarly impact of scientific research produced in the region measured in terms of citation rate remains low Two interrelated factors that contribute to this situation is that most research groups tend to work in isolation or in local sporadic collaboration and results are often published in journals that are not indexed in major citation databases e g SCOPUS or Web of Science Ultimately part of Latin American high quality research seems to remain hidden from the rest of the world Over the last decades an important number of Latin American scientists have developed fruitful research agendas on questions on learning and emotion focusing on basic and or translational research with humans and other animal models and implementing diverse methodologies Notwithstanding the important contributions of these research programs Latin American research on emotion and learning has followed the overall trend of other research fields throughout the region namely remaining partially hidden from the large scientific community of the world This Research Topic aimed to engage researchers from Latin America to share their empirical and conceptual work on learning and emotion Ultimately this effort was expected to strengthen and integrate our regional community of experts enhance global networking and establish new challenges and developments for future investigation

Systematic Approaches to Mental Health Care and Promotion

Bach Tran, Roger C. Ho, Brian James Hall, 2020-06-05 Globally mental health problems remain as one of the largest contributors to the population burden of diseases According to WHO common mental disorders including depression and anxiety affect the health of about 9% of the world s population and account for over 10% of the total years lived with disability In many parts of the world the number of people with mental health disorders has been increasing fueled by a rapid population growth and aging as well as urbanization and immigration It is estimated that 80% of these non fatal diseases occurred in low and middle income countries However in such settings coverage of both preventive and curative services is still very limited Diversity in socio cultural backgrounds and limited capacity of local health care systems are emphasizing the importance of systematic approaches to understanding and intervening in the issue Although the social economic and health burden of mental health issues are substantial effectiveness of policies and interventions is varied across regions and largely driven by contextual factors Evidence based prevention and treatment approaches involve the synthesis of epidemiological surveys assessment of clinical populations e g chronic medical diseases chronic psychiatric illnesses and studies exploring the role of biological markers in psychiatric illnesses This Research Topic aims to introduce the latest research findings on the application of system thinking in Mental Health Care and Promotion
