

PATTERNS OF CRUSTAL ACTIVITY

Pattern of Crustal Activity Lab

Introduction: Earth's outer shell, called the lithosphere, is broken into big and small pieces that float on a semi-fluid layer beneath them called the asthenosphere. These pieces are always moving, and where they interact with each other, we see interesting geological activity like earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, and mountain formation. In this lab, you'll explore how these events are not random but follow specific patterns. By looking at where earthquakes happen, scientists can find plate boundaries and understand how these plates move. You'll use historical data and current observations on seismic and volcanic activity to see how these processes work. This will help you understand the exciting and ever-changing geology of our planet.

Objective: In this lab, you will explore how different types of crustal activities are related to specific locations. You'll plot where earthquakes happen most often, analyze their depths, and identify other geological events that seem to be linked to these earthquake zones.

Keywords:

- Lithosphere
- Asthenosphere

Pattern Questions

Using your world map, describe the locations of earthquakes, volcanoes, and mountains. Are these occurrences randomly distributed or do they follow a specific pattern?

Which country of North and South America has the greatest amount of earthquakes, and what is significant?

Which ocean has the greatest amount of earthquakes, volcanoes, and mountains?

Using your world map, what is the probability of either an earthquake or volcano occurring in your region? Explain why.

How do the "world-wide crustal activity" and the "tectonic plates" maps in this lab compare to the pattern of the plate boundaries of the globe?
