

3. Architectural and Landscape Standards

3.1. OBJECTIVE

The Architectural and Landscape Standards are provided so that Homeowners are aware of the standards and requirements for some of the more common Improvements, such as modifications or additions of structures/materials, landscape/hardscape changes and exterior painting.

When considering a home improvement project, you will save a lot of time, expense and disappointment by carefully reviewing the information in this chapter so you fully understand the requirements associated with the type of Improvement(s) you are contemplating. Additionally, you should read chapter 2 Architectural Approval: General Information starting on page 2 so you fully understand the types of projects that require approval and are completely familiar with the approval process. Providing this Architectural Procedures and Standards document to architects and contractors during the initial planning phases can help ensure they design a project that may be readily approved avoiding potential delays and additional costs to re-work plans.

The following sections provide general standards and guidelines for Homeowners so that they can more effectively plan their Improvement projects and comply with Architectural Rules and Regulations. The standards also provide the foundation for reviewing and approving Home Improvement Applications on a consistent basis. The Architectural Control Committee (hereafter referred to as "ACC") will use these guidelines when making approval decisions; however, even if an Improvement complies with the general guidelines, the ACC reserves the right, as provided in the CC&Rs, to deny approval based on AESTHETIC REASONS.

Additionally, even if an Improvement complies with the guidelines below, it does not release the Homeowner from submitting a Home Improvement Application if one is required (as indicated in the sections below) for the type of Improvement being made. Regardless of whether or not a proposed Improvement is described in these guidelines, if the Improvement meets any of the criteria listed in section 2.2 Improvements That Need Approval on page 3, a Home Improvement Application and prior approval from the ACC is required before commencement of any Improvement. Failure to submit an application and/or implementing Improvements that require prior approval constitute a violation of the Governing Documents subject to cease-and-desist notices or orders, hearings, fines and legal action.

As a guide to helping you locate the guidelines and standards that may apply to the Improvement you are considering, please refer to the Table of Contents to find the appropriate page(s). Many of the items listed are combined with other items in a single topic section, but are listed individually and by multiple names for ease of use. Each section indicates which application form to use (forms are available in the "Documents" section of the Canyon Creek website).
